

DIGITAL MKTG STRATEGY PROPOSAL

By: AYCCE Collective

Table of Contents

Executive Summary.....	2
Objectives + SMART Goals.....	3
Research Insights + Recommendations.....	4
Content Strategy.....	7

User Personas.....	9
Omni-Channel Campaign Strategy.....	10
a. Newsletter.....	11
b. Podcast.....	16
c. Youtube.....	18
Strategic Brand Partnerships.....	19
a. 3 micro influencers to target customers.....	19
b. 3 macro influencers to target customers.....	20
c. 3 brands to collaborate with for the summer season.....	20
Paid Advertisements + Copywriting.....	21
a. Facebook.....	22
b. Instagram.....	23
c. Pinterest.....	24
Platform + Software Integrations (AI).....	25
Conclusion	26

Executive Summary

Surfside is a rapidly growing canned alcohol beverage brand, renowned for its easy-going, beach-themed style, described as “sunshine in a can”. It is primarily known as a non-carbonated alternative to other competing seltzers within the canned cocktail industry, emphasizing variations of hard iced tea and hard lemonade flavors.

With summer rapidly approaching, Surfside is recognizing the season as an opportunity for critical growth within the market and must take advantage of all opportunities to grow the brand to new heights. In pursuit of this growth, Surfside is striving to increase its online presence, upgrade and develop email and SMS strategies, increase retail sales, implement new and improve upon existing online channels, work with influencers on the micro and macro level, and finally develop strong benchmarks into its content plans.

Having researched Surfside's active media pages, it was evident that the implementation of new marketing tactics was paramount for sustaining positive growth. While Surfside has many strengths when it comes to its online appearance, themed marketing campaigns, and use of social media, there is room for improvement in these categories. In this proposal, Surfside is being approached with a new $100k content strategy, including a $35k allocation to hero content, the driving force behind updated marketing campaigns. Coinciding with this, Surfside will delve into multiple categories of content, including new YouTube videos, podcast episodes, and newsletters, in addition to its existing social media outlets. Similarly, the company will also expand its demand generation by investing in paid advertisements in tandem with updated SMS and email marketing platforms for loyalty building and demand harvesting purposes. These goals will be accomplished through the application of the suggested new platforms and software integrations, Meta Advantage+, Attentive, and Omnisend.

With the updated marketing succession plan, Surfside is poised to take full advantage of the upcoming summer season by carrying out an overhaul of its existing marketing to take it to the next level, and therefore increase its customer base.

Objectives + SMART Goals

Surfside's 2026 Summer strategy is built around five measurable objectives spanning brand awareness, audience growth, retail performance, content channel launches, and influencer impact. These are each tied to specific metrics and deadlines across the May through August season.

The first objective is brand awareness and reach, with a goal of increasing total social media reach by 30% year-over-year between May 1 and August 31, 2026. Success will be tracked through impressions, follower growth of 30% across Instagram, TikTok, and YouTube Shorts, and a cumulative 2 million video views across all platforms by the end of the season.

The second objective focuses on owned audience growth through email and SMS. The target is to add 50,000 new combined subscribers before July 4th, 2026, measured by new subscriber count, cost per subscriber, and an SMS opt-in rate of at least 25% of the email base. Key tactics driving this goal include a "Summer Starts Here" giveaway, QR codes placed at retail locations and events, and influencer swipe-up opt-ins throughout the season.

The third objective is retail sales lift, aiming for a 20% increase in sell-through across Surfside's top 10 retail markets compared to Summer 2025. Performance will be measured through velocity per store per week, promo redemption rates, and geo-targeted paid media results. Supporting tactics include geo-fenced paid ads, an SMS "Find It Near You" campaign, and influencer content that calls out specific store locations.

The fourth objective is the launch of Surfside's video and podcast channels. The YouTube channel should launch by May 15, 2026, reaching 20,000 subscribers, 200,000 cumulative long-form video views, and a 10% average view rate by season's end. The accompanying podcast targets 8,000 downloads within its first eight weeks of release.

The fifth objective covers influencer impact, targeting partnerships with 20 micro-influencers in the 10–50k follower range and 5 macro-influencers with 250k or more followers between April and August 2026. Combined, these partnerships should generate 3 million cumulative impressions, a 5% average engagement rate, and 10,000 tracked link clicks across the season.

Finally, all paid media activity is held to consistent performance benchmarks integrated into the broader $100k content plan: a click-through rate above 1.5%, a cost per acquisition below $8 for email acquisition campaigns, and a return on ad spend above 3.0 for retail-focused campaigns.

Research Insights + Recommendations

Media Analysis

Website

Surfside's website makes a strong and immediate first impression. The hero section leads with a bold "Sunshine in a Can" headline set against a bright golf course backdrop, with the 100 calories and 0 bubbles callout front and center, communicating the brand's core value proposition within seconds of landing on the page. Navigation is clean and intuitive, with dedicated buttons for Flavors, Press, Find in Store, and Shop, keeping the experience simple and purposeful. The new flavors section is visually well-executed, showcasing the colorful can lineup in lifestyle settings that feel consistent with the brand's sun-soaked aesthetic. The product information page is a particular standout, using four branded badges, "No Bubbles No Troubles," "Gluten Can Piss Off," "Can't Fake What's Inside," and "Proudly Kosher Rabbi Approved" — to communicate product credentials in a way that is both informative and true to the brand's personality. The embedded "Get Social" section brings the Instagram community onto the site effectively, with content like the Good Vibes Tour RV post reinforcing the experiential side of the brand.

That said, there are meaningful opportunities to strengthen the site's digital marketing performance. The newsletter signup, while styled well with a "Join the Party" CTA, is positioned at the very bottom of the page below all footer links, significantly limiting its visibility and opt-in potential. Moving this to a pop-up or prominent above-the-fold placement and pairing with an incentive like a discount or exclusive offer would meaningfully improve list growth. Additionally, the site only links to Instagram and Facebook, with those icons appearing twice in the mid-page and footer sections, but no links to TikTok, X, or YouTube despite Surfside maintaining verified presences on those platforms. This creates a fragmented brand experience and misses an opportunity to drive cross-platform engagement. Finally, both shopping options redirect users to Stateside Brands rather than completing the purchase on the Surfside site itself, which introduces unnecessary friction in the conversion path. Overall, the website reflects a strong and cohesive brand identity. These recommendations are opportunities to maximize an already solid foundation rather than overhaul what is working.

Email Newsletter

The existing email newsletter does several things well. First, it leads with strong brand imagery of friends enjoying Surfside at the beach, centers the logo prominently, and uses large, legible text that reinforces the brand's visual identity. An "Order Now" button and links to press and media content add utility, and Facebook and Instagram are linked via icons. However, there are meaningful gaps to address. The newsletter should be triggered as a pop-up on the website with an incentive such as a discount or free gift to drive sign-ups. Content should be made more interactive and include current promotional campaigns to keep subscribers engaged. X should also be added to the social links for consistency. One significant issue is that the newsletter is currently being flagged as spam upon sign-up, which needs to be resolved to protect deliverability and list growth.

Instagram

Instagram is where Surfside's digital presence is strongest. The profile is well-constructed, and the logo serves as the profile picture, the bio communicates the brand personality clearly with the "no bubbles no troubles" slogan, and pinned posts effectively highlight the product alongside a notable Forbes feature. Highlighted Stories provide clear pathways to promotions and purchase. The brand integrates naturally with sports culture, pop culture, and seasonal events, and the active "Good Vibes Tour" campaign (featuring an RV traveling through Florida with free samples and a photo booth) is a strong example of experiential marketing extending into social content. Influencer partnerships are also in use. The main areas for improvement are engagement and discoverability: Surfside should respond to customer comments more consistently, ensure influencer collaborators are properly tagged in posts, and use hashtags more strategically around the brand slogan, name, and relevant events to expand organic reach.

Facebook

Facebook represents the weakest channel in Surfside's current digital presence. The about page is underdeveloped and does not give new visitors a clear picture of the brand, and engagement is notably low, with approximately 12,000 followers and fewer than 100 likes on most posts. Given that Facebook's user base skews older than platforms like Instagram or TikTok, the recommendation is to tailor content strategy here toward an older demographic, like emphasizing lifestyle, occasions, and product education, rather than the trend-driven content that performs on other channels. Increasing posting frequency and improving the page's profile information would be foundational first steps.

X (Twitter)

Surfside has a verified X account but is not leveraging it effectively. The brand's content on X is heavily skewed toward baseball, missing an opportunity to associate with the broader range of sports and lifestyle contexts the brand is built around. The recommendation is to diversify sports associations and actively engage with high-impression posts and conversations already happening on the platform, which is a low-cost way to increase visibility and brand relevance.

TikTok

TikTok's algorithm heavily rewards consistency, and Surfside's current posting inactivity is working against the brand's ability to build traction on the platform. The primary recommendation is to increase post frequency significantly, using creator-native formats like trending audio, POV content, day-in-the-life, rather than repurposed assets from other channels. Regular activity is the single most important factor in maintaining and growing reach on TikTok.

Content Strategy

Budget Allocation ($100K)

The largest share of the budget ($35k) goes toward hero content production, covering 2-3 high-quality video shoots in beach and outdoor lifestyle settings that serve as the anchor for all channels throughout the season. This includes footage that can be adapted for YouTube, paid ads, and organic social, making it the most leveraged spend in the plan. From there, $25k is allocated to influencer and creator partnerships, split between macro influencers for broad reach and micro-influencers in key markets like San Diego, Miami, and Austin. Authenticity takes priority over raw numbers, and these partnerships feed directly into the brand's omni-channel presence. Paid social amplification across Instagram, Facebook, and Pinterest receives $20k, though that spend shouldn't be activated until organic content has demonstrated what's resonating. An additional $8k is set aside for podcast and YouTube-specific production which covering recording equipment, editing, copyright rights to music, and episode development costs as Surfside builds out those new channels. Photography and static assets receive $7k for product shots, lifestyle stills, and retailer materials, and a $5k contingency is held back for trending moments, UGC amplification, or opportunistic collaborations.

Content to Develop for Launch + H1

The centerpiece is a 60–90 second "Summer Starts Here" hero brand film positioning Surfside as the drink for easy, in-between summer moments like post-surf, rooftop hangs, a pregame that stays chill rather than loud. That film gets cut down into 15s and 6s versions for paid social, pre-roll, and stories across platforms. On the creator side, product should be seeded to both macro and micro influencers 3-4 weeks before launch to generate authentic first-taste content that feels organic rather than scripted. Throughout the season, an occasion-based content series ties Surfside to specific summer moments like beach volleyball, boat days, backyard cookouts, and outdoor concerts. This gives each channel a consistent but platform-native story to tell. Clean retailer and trade assets round out the production needs for in-store displays, end caps, and cooler clings, while a simple UGC challenge or tag mechanic encourages real customers to post and become part of the brand story.

Building the Story Across Digital Channels

Instagram serves as the visual anchor, where a clean, sun-drenched feed aesthetic is maintained while Stories and Reels carry behind-the-scenes and creator content. TikTok requires a different approach however. Content here should be built natively by creators rather than repurposed from Instagram, leaning into trending audio, POV formats, and day-in-the-life styles. Paid social spans Instagram, Facebook, and Pinterest with 3-4 creative variants tested early, scaling only what performs. Email and SMS form a critical owned-channel layer: a pre-launch teaser, a launch day announcement, and a recurring "where to find us this summer" series keep the brand top of mind with existing customers especially if Surfside can create content with their mobile van. YouTube and podcast content extend the brand narrative into longer-form storytelling, building credibility and community beyond the scroll. In markets where Surfside has retail presence, paid content should be geotargeted to align with in-store activations.

The season follows a clear narrative arc: the pre-launch window (2-3 weeks out) is for teasing, seeding creators, and building curiosity; launch week is when the hero content drops, paid turns on, and the first email goes out; mid-season through June and July sustains momentum with occasion content, podcast episodes, and UGC amplification; and late August shifts to a "last days of summer" tone while capturing learnings to carry into the fall strategy.

User Personas

Jose Martinez

BIO

Jake spends his weekends or his free time going out with his friends or hanging out with his coworkers after a shift. His go to spots are the beach, the park, or meeting up at a friend's house. He's extroverted and outgoing, always trying to make any time as fun as possible. He likes to get easy to grab drinks with a variety where he can be confident people will enjoy.

VALUES/GOALS

- Have fun with friends
- Keep things simple and easy
- Making sure people are having a good time

DEMOGRAPHICS

- Occupation: Server at a Restaurant
- Age: 26
- Location: San Diego, CA

DISLIKES

- Doesn't have time to make complicated drinks
- Needs drinks that are available at his favorite spots
- Needs something portable and shareable

FAVORITE BRANDS

Chelsea Whittaker

BIO

Chelsea focuses her lifestyle on health and wellness but also does want a drink from time to time if she's at a social event. Drinks that are low calorie and contain low sugar are important to her so she feels she is aligned with her health goals.

VALUES/GOALS

- Maintain a healthy lifestyle
- Can drink without guilt
- Choose brands that have health as part of their identity

DEMOGRAPHICS

- Age: 31
- Occupation: Yoga Instructor
- Location: Denver, Colorado

DISLIKES

- Sugary, high-calorie alcoholic drinks
- Artificial ingredients
- Heavy Hangovers

FAVORITE BRANDS

Anthony Johnson

BIO

Marcus centers his life around sports, he is up to date with all sports players and any statistics from past or present. He loves going to games as a season ticket holder and hanging out at tailgates before the games and going to parties to watch games with his friends and family. Anthony loves using sports as a conduit for his social activities and likes to stay up to date with all sports affairs.

VALUES/GOALS

- Maximize the game day experience
- Enjoy drinks that are easy to carry around
- Stay social and engaged without interruptions

DEMOGRAPHICS

- Age: 22
- Occupation: Sales Representative
- Location: Chicago, IL

DISLIKES

- Long concession lines that pull him away from the game
- Heavy alcoholic drinks that make him lose focus on the game
- Limited drink options that feel boring or generic

FAVORITE BRANDS

Eugene Rockwell

BIO

Eugene is a big career focused individual but he also likes to have a good time on his days off. Whether with he's with his friends on the weekends or outreaching with other business professionals he likes to hit the courses and needs a couple drinks to get everyone in a good and competitive mood. These weekends are important to Eugene because they're his outlet from the stress of his job.

VALUES/GOALS

- Connect with business professionals in a fun way
- Make sure everyone's in a good mood
- Drinks that he can carry around easily and are easy to hand around.

DEMOGRAPHICS

- Age: 45
- Occupation: Investment Brokerage manager
- Location: Miami, FL

DISLIKES

- Not being able to stay sharp and connect with people
- Expensive country club cocktails on the courses
- The possibility of a weekend ruined

FAVORITE BRANDS

Omni-Channel Campaign Strategy

Email Newsletters

A LIGHTER WAY TO DRINK THIS WEEKEND

Why Surfside?

- Made with Real Tea
- Made with Real Juice
- Only 100 Calories
- 2 Grams of Sugar

A CLEANER WAY TO SIP

Surfside's all-natural ingredients, premium vodka, and low sugar content make Surfside a great pick for those who want a clean, crisp, and easy to enjoy drink.

TRY SURFSIDE THIS WEEKEND

Don't Show Up Empty Handed

BRING SURFSIDE TO YOUR NEXT GATHERING

Why Surfside?
Ready to Drink
Variety of Flavors
Delicious

FIND SURFSIDE NEAR YOU

Find Your Next Favorite Flavor

Check Out Our Giveaway!

Surf n Turf

IS HERE!

Sign Up Today and Win:

- 2 Limited Edition Surf n Turf T-Shirts
- 2 Surfside Koozies
- $250 Gift Card

How To Enter

Like Our Facebook Post

Tag A Friend!

Follow @DrinkSurfside

LIKE US ON FACEBOOK

SMS Marketing

Podcast

Episode 1 - The Weekend Playbook (The Social Drinker)

This episode of the podcast will be a strong opener to help Surfside establish itself as a cool company that caters to people who like to have fun, casually drinking with friends on the weekends. The episode will feature 3-4 employees from the company who are playfully notorious for living it up with one another on the weekends. The premise will be that they are telling funny stories from their times hanging out when they were drinking Surfsides, as well as good advice on what differentiates a good hangout from a bad one. To keep it structured, the friends will tackle one topic at a time. Various topics will include: the best hangouts they've ever had, loosely emphasizing Surfside's role, the perfect recipe for an effortless kickback, things that ruin the vibe with stories to coincide, and finally, a rapid-fire section about preferences, best moments, or embarrassing stories. This episode will be an enjoyable experience for not only people who are fans of Surfside, but also people who like to spend time sharing any sort of drink with their friends on the weekend. Jose Martinez, our social drinker, is the perfect target for a listener of this episode.

Episode 2 - Behind The Can (Health-Conscious Sipper)

This podcast episode will dive deep into the creation of the beverage consumers know and love, sharing what feels like fun insider information in a fun and transparent way. The episode will be structured in the form of an interview, where the host will have a factory manager and a project developer present to answer various questions about all things production when it comes to Surfside. Many topics will be covered in this episode, including how the product is made, truths about low-calorie drinks, interesting facts that most brands don't typically tell customers, and even how new flavors are decided and created. This episode of the podcast is designed to be interesting and informative, presenting a plethora of useful information in a credible manner that somebody such as Chelsea Whittaker, our health-conscious sipper, would find fascinating.

Episode 3 - Perfect Game Day ProKit (The Game Day Fan)

This episode is catered to a true game day pro, someone who lives for the game and understands the importance of standing by their team. Drafting the perfect game day is often a controversial topic, as everyone has their own idea of what that looks like. We will also spotlight Surfside as a top pick for the choice of drink. In this episode, the hosts break down what's essential for creating the ultimate game day experience. The conversation is competitive and highly interactive, pulling in listeners and encouraging them to think about their own game day setups. Midway through, we introduce a game that brings the energy up, building off everything discussed about creating the perfect game day. We also include a wrap-up of recent games, leading into a "Two-Minute Drill: Game Day Edition," where hosts and guests rapidly debate different topics in under two minutes. Overall, the episode is fast-paced, high-energy, and intense, designed to get listeners fully hyped and ready for the game.

Episode 4 - What Makes a Perfect Round? (The Weekend Golfer)

This episode centers around the golfer persona, focusing on creating a dynamic debate between the hosts and listeners about what truly makes a perfect round. It explores the key elements that shape that experience, from specific techniques in the course to the overall mood and mindset needed to stay consistent and perform well. A major part of that conversation is what you're drinking. This is where Surfside is naturally integrated, emphasizing its portability, accessibility, and cost-effectiveness throughout the round. It becomes part of the overall formula for keeping the experience smooth, social, and enjoyable without disrupting focus. The episode is designed to be highly interactive, encouraging listeners to share their own ideas of what makes their perfect round, from gameplay strategies to drink choices. It also includes a call to action, inviting listeners to try Surfside themselves as a way to stay sharp, relaxed, and fully engaged throughout every detail of the game.

Video 1- Influencer Interviewing (Long Shorts Video)

At a sports game, we'll collaborate with a small sports YouTuber (eg, Jackson Olson). The video would start with Jackson saying that he's partnering with Surfside to find the insights of fans, then going out pre and post-game to different fans asking them questions about their favorite teams, players, and favorite rituals. Finally, we'll ask them what their go-to beverage choice is for gameday and ask them if they have ever heard of Surfside, proceeding to give them a free can. We can then have them try it to tell us what they think. The video would be approximately 2 minutes long.

Video 2- Sensory forward commercial at a beach

The commercial starts off at the beach with people sitting in beach chairs when someone opens a cooler of Surfside, and it pans to a top-down view of the can with the sound and visual of the can opening. Then it pans again to everyone dancing and partying on the shoreline with the surfside cans in hand. Laughter will be audible alongside soft sounds of the waves crashing.

Video 3- Competitive Game Video

An advertisement where middle-aged men are playing a game at a golf course, and their goal is to "play golf," but instead of hitting it in the hole, they have to knock over a can of surfside. They are drinking surfside while competing with each other. Cutting over to their great shots and miserable misses, their banter, all while having them drinking surfside with a smile on their face. The winner at the end gets a 24 pack of Surfside and is celebrating on a podium, while the losers look saddened while golf clapping, but setting a theme of unity. We are the champions playing during the celebration part of the ad.

Video 4- Informative-based video

Short video with a panoramic of the different beverages in line adjacent to fruits and a very vibrant, colorful background with the song "Walking on Sunshine" playing in the background softly with a woman's voice saying, "A non-carbonated seltzer made with real tea, premium vodka, and a variety of flavors to choose from, it delivers a crisp, clean taste at only 100 calories. Made for wherever the good times take you. Surfside no bubbles, no troubles."

Video 5- Campaign-based video

Based on their current Surf and Turf campaign. The video will start with a POV of entering Chickie's and Pete's and a montage of the meet and greet with Jimmy Rollins, and then cut over to people enjoying their food at the restaurant and other participating restaurants with the Surfside drink combo. It will end with a drone zooming out from the restaurant and over the city of Philadelphia with the Surfside logo centered at the front of the screen. Paradise by Coldplay would be playing in the background throughout the video.

Strategic Brand Partnerships

Micro-Influencers

Jennifer Friday

- Las Vegas-based content creator and beverage cart girl at a golf course
- 34K followers on her personal Instagram, 452K on her golf-focused account @jennnbellee
- Built her platform documenting real, candid interactions with golfers on the course
- Content style is fun, relatable, and humor-driven — matches Surfside's laid-back brand voice perfectly
- Her audience is primarily golfers and golf lifestyle enthusiasts, which aligns directly with Surfside's existing sports marketing and golf course imagery
- As someone who literally serves drinks on a golf course, a Surfside collab would feel completely organic rather than forced

WHY?

Kumari Arianna

- Beach and coastal lifestyle content creator with an authentic, sun-soaked aesthetic
- Content leans heavily into beach days, ocean moments, and island-inspired living
- Already has swimwear brand collab experience with @maoiswim, showing she's comfortable with sponsored content and product integration
- Content style is vibrant and lifestyle-forward — aligns directly with Surfside's colorful, summer-first brand identity

WHY?

JB

- Bio reads "Be your own sun 🌞🌿", very aligned with Surfside's sunshine and good vibes identity
- Already partnered with Fujifilm (@fujifilmfrance and @fujifilm_id), showing brand collab experience
- Content themes include cinematic travel, nature, and adventure, visually beautiful and aspirational
- His aesthetic and vibe match Surfside's color palette and laid-back outdoor energy perfectly

WHY?

Macro-Influencers

Madison Beer

@madisonbeer

WHY?

- Global Reach & Influence (40M+ Followers in IG)
- Involvement in the fashion and music Industry.
- Cross-generation appeal

Rory McIlroy

@rorymcilroy

WHY?

- Among the best professional golfers in the world
- 2x Back-to-Back Masters Champion
- Affiliated with large, reputable companies

David Dobrik

@daviddobrik

WHY?

- Tens of millions of followers across multiple platforms
- Known for high-energy, social atmosphere
- High-engagement, short-duration content

Brand Collaborations

MLB-PNC Park

PNC Park

- Proven stadium success: Surfside already has locations at other baseball stadiums where they have pop-ups specifically for their products. This is an expansion of something that is already working.
- Reliable Income/Sales: Stadiums are consistently holding games and have people buying concessions frequently meaning that sales are assured
- Regional brand building: Expands brand reach more nationally and helps consumers identify with the brand.
- Game-day culture fit: Light, refreshing drinks with low alcohol are ideal for watching sports games.

WHY?

Live Nation

Live Nation

- Mass exposure: Live Nation runs thousands of concerts and festivals which helps branch the Surfside brand to new and potential customers
- Situational Influence: People frequently purchase and drink alcoholic beverages at festivals and live music events which will influence customers to purchase surfside because limited products are available and Surfside will be there.
- Demographic: Younger audiences tend to go to concerts held by Live Nation which fits in with our target demographic increasing the likelihood of exposure and conversion.
- VIP Lounge access: At certain venues we can create VIP rooms that are associated with our brand to help create desire and positive brand association for Surfside

WHY?

Billabong

BILLABONG

- Brand alignment: Both companies represent surf and beach culture. With a congruent brand identity there is a higher likelihood of consumers to connect with the collaboration and deepen consumer identity with the brand.
- Merch: We would be able to create an exclusive clothing drop that associates with the Surfside brand. This can become a staple for our brand and help with multiple promotional aspects.
- Authenticity boost: Billabong would support the credibility of Surfside's brand identity helping align the perception of the brand to the consumer.

WHY?

Paid Advertisements + Copywriting

Facebook

This Facebook paid advertisement targets males and females ages 30–50 who enjoy casual social settings such as backyard barbecues, sporting events, and outdoor activities like golf, which aligns with Surfside’s “weekend golfer” and social lifestyle personas. The ad will run on Facebook as a sponsored post with an estimated spend of $6,000 over four weeks, with the primary objective of driving conversions and in-store traffic. The visual features a relaxed, real-life setting of friends enjoying Surfside on a golf course, reinforcing the brand’s role in everyday social occasions. The headline, “Your Go-To for Easy Summer Weekends,” emphasizes convenience and versatility, while the caption highlights key product benefits: “Whether it’s a backyard BBQ, a day on the course, or watching the game, Surfside is the perfect grab-and-go drink. Made with real tea, only 100 calories, and no bubbles—just smooth, refreshing flavor.” The call-to-action, “Find It Near You,” encourages immediate purchase behavior by directing consumers to nearby retailers. Overall, this ad leverages a more practical and relatable approach tailored to Facebook’s slightly older audience, focusing on real-life usage occasions and clear product value to drive action.

Instagram

This Instagram paid advertisement targets males and females ages 21–30 who enjoy social settings, outdoor activities, and summer experiences such as beach days, concerts, and casual hangouts with friends, aligning closely with Surfside’s “social drinker” persona. The ad will run on Instagram across feed and stories with an estimated spend of $6,500 over a four-week period to drive brand awareness and engagement during the peak summer season. The creative features a bright, vibrant imagery of friends holding Surfside cans, reinforcing the brand’s social and shareable nature. The headline, “Sunshine in a Can,” highlights the brand’s core identity, while the caption emphasizes seasonal relevance and promotion: “The Surfside wave isn’t slowing down 🌊 Summer’s calling, and we’re answering ☀️ Buy one pack, get one FREE all season long—because good vibes are better shared.” The call-to-action, “Find Your Flavor,” encourages users to explore product options and make a purchase. Overall, this ad leverages strong visual branding and a promotional incentive to capture attention and drive consumer action on a platform where Surfside already performs well.

Pinterest

This Pinterest paid advertisement targets females ages 21–35 who are interested in wellness, summer aesthetics, and curated social experiences such as beach days, brunches, and hosting gatherings, aligning closely with Surfside’s health-conscious and lifestyle-focused persona. The ad will run on Pinterest as a promoted pin with an estimated spend of $5,500 over a four-week period, aiming to drive product discovery and website traffic during the summer season. The visual features a clean, aesthetically pleasing beach background with a Surfside can, and fresh fruit, designed to feel aspirational and “save-worthy” for users browsing inspiration content. The headline, “Summer Hosting Essential ☀️,” positions Surfside as a staple for curated summer moments, while supporting text highlights key product benefits: “100 Calories • No Bubbles • Easy Sipping.” The call-to-action, “Grab A Pack,” encourages users to explore the product lineup. Overall, this ad leverages Pinterest’s highly visual and female-dominant user base by presenting Surfside as a light, refreshing, and stylish addition to everyday summer experiences.

100 Calories • No Bubbles • All Summer...

Surfside
Sponsored

Example of possible women's Pinterest board below with saved Surfside ad for inspiration

Platform and Software Integrations

To improve Surfside's digital presence, the company will be integrating three new marketing platforms to their repertoire. These additions will allow Surfside to more effectively target potential consumers in three areas: demand generation, demand harvesting, and loyalty building.

Meta Advantage+

Meta Advantage+ is an AI-powered suite of products designed to optimize social media campaign performance. The platform automatically applies its artificial intelligence towards the campaign's audience, placement, and budget. Meta Advantage+ claims to improve cost per acquisition by upwards of 7%. Additionally, it boasts a 10% lower cost per qualified lead and a 20% improvement in cost per acquisition when using Advantage+ sales campaigns. This service is used by many reputable companies, including Hydro Flask, Vuori, Mattel, and Unilever. Implementation of Meta Advantage+ will result in more cost-effective demand generation for Surfside when uploading paid advertisements on flagship social media platforms.

Attentive

Attentive is an SMS, RCS, and email marketing tool that utilizes AI functions to capture, store, and activate customer data in a cost-effective manner. Used by large companies such as Samsung, Reebok, and Crocs, Attentive integrates personalized data to deliver highly effective digital marketing directly to consumers, particularly with its SMS functions. Its SMS function, which Surfside should adopt, promises over 2x conversion rates, 50% higher spending rates from replying customers, and over 1 billion messages sent and received monthly. Surfside will be able to directly target consumers with necessary information, including but not limited to: new flavor drops, online or in-store sales promotions, or local events taking place. SMS marketing is an underutilized market for the company, and necessary steps should be taken to adopt Attentive. Implementation of a platform such as this, for Surfside, is a necessary and worthwhile investment towards harvesting demand from potential customers, of which Surfside possesses a phone number.

Omnisend

Omnisend, another email and SMS marketing platform, is one of the best at what it does. This software is designed to make email campaigns as effective as possible. By simply uploading brand assets, Omnisend can heavily assist in creating campaigns that are on brand every time. With over 150,000 brands using and trusting it, the company advertises a $79:1 ROI ratio, solidifying itself as a strong investment. It also has many different pricing options based on the volume of customers that emails will be sent to, with further options to use either the standard model or pro, which provides support for unlimited emails and support for more contacts, depending on the volume of customers. Omnisend also provides support and recommendations for campaigns to assist in making them as effective as possible, thus transferring much hard work away from Surfside's in-house marketing team. Utilizing this platform would alleviate a lot of labor from Surfside, while enabling them to make more money in the process.

Conclusion

Surfside is a generally recognizable brand, although not as mature as brands such as White Claw and Truly. They are currently growing as a company and with their product line. We have chosen to focus on developing brand awareness and outreach across digital platforms because the brand already has a consistent product, so a majority of marketing efforts need to be focused on generating demand from consumers. Surfside has a strong brand identity that can connect with a wide array of consumers, so utilizing this is pivotal to the success of the current campaign.

The reason we decided to branch out into new media-centric marketing is that consumers are increasingly spending more time on internet platforms compared to traditional media such as TV commercials and Radio ads. A lot of our media is owned media, reducing our costs with most of them focused on partnerships and production. The multi-media strategy also lets us demonstrate our company identity efficiently, creating better brand recognition amongst new and recurring customers. The use of Influencer content marketing and brand partnerships is the primary method for our expansion of brand awareness. This will be the majority of our expenses, but it is expected to propel our growth better than other outlets. We chose to partner with Baseball stadiums, Jennifer Friday, and Rory McIlroy to expand our outreach with sports enthusiasts. We chose Billabong, Kumari Arianna, and JB to reach the beach lifestyle. Finally, we partnered with Live Nation, Madison Beer, and David Dobrik for large-scale multi-industry placement and general population outreach.

For our owned media, we plan on developing existing media platforms and also branching into creating a YouTube channel and podcast for our brand that lets us streamline our brand identity and promise to the consumer. Creating engaging content that a consumer will elect to interact with rather than forcing them, as advertisements frequently do. The YouTube channel and podcast episodes will be centered around the same topics, but have their respective creative elements based on their platforms. The production can be done in an inexpensive way with the potential to catch virality and reach a mass audience. Additionally, our platform integration will add supplemental use and accessibility from the back end to create manageable systems for observing metrics and keeping consistent brand production throughout all potential platforms.

Our goal to increase retail sales will be done through a mix of direct and indirect methods. Since we are partnering with Live Nation and more baseball stadiums, we are increasing our chance to get first-time purchases, and with a strong product, we can assume that people will enjoy our product, leading to the first step in repeat purchasing. Additionally, we will use SMS and Email marketing campaigns to remind consumers of our products, leading to higher purchase rates. Our SMS marketing directly lets individuals know of upcoming events or scenarios in which they can enjoy our product. The former creates excitement around the product for existing customers, and the latter simply presents scenarios to reinforce the use of our product to existing customers. The email marketing campaigns include the same methods as our SMS campaign, but also have a link to help customers locate stores that are close to them. We also have emails that promote the benefits of our products and suggest to the consumer to go grab a pack. We have the phrase "Grab a Pack" filtered throughout multiple outlets of our campaign, which helps increase the likelihood of retail purchasing in our advertisement methods.

By using an all-encompassing omnichannel campaign, we should be capable of measuring significant growth in new consumers and expanding our brand awareness primarily through our influencer and brand partnerships. The email and SMS campaigns are designed to create attention for new and existing consumers while also creating awareness and encouraging retail purchasing. Our YouTube and podcast media will be designed to increase novel engagement and not turn into direct sales, but to improve brand image in the mind of the consumer. We will use software integration to streamline all media and ensure our campaigns align with brand identity. The effects of all our efforts should be reflected as a significant gain in product awareness among new consumers and excitement with the novelty of our product, which will indirectly increase our long-term sales alongside methods for encouraging repeat purchases to sustain long-term revenue and profitability.